WOW, SAME.

> As someone closeted to their family. Hearing parents ask about a potential girlfriends and a future wife make the conversation so awkward.

> I have been on so many wlw dates where both parties were too shy to even touch hands. The "I wish I had kissed you" texts that follow are hilarious and a bit sad.

> "Left my packer in the bathroom and roommates saw it - had to come up with a wild story because I am not out to them!"

> "I hooked up with a girl on a camping trip in the tent while everyone else was around on the campsite. We said we were napping!"

"Awkward - my roommate accidentally heard me having a sexual experience for the first time, I'm still so sorry."

"I cried after having my first kiss with a girl at a school dance. I was so overwhelmed I just couldn't take it anymore but it definitely solidified that I like girls."

When I was in the 2nd-3rd grade I was strangely obsessed with this girl in the year above me, simple kid stuff like just wanting to stare at her in the halls and using her assignments as inspiration and stuff but never talking to her. Ya know, one of those moments where you don't realize it was a crush until you find out what LGBT+ means. She moved in like fourth grade but we ended up at the same high school. Obviously I never talked to her but I followed her on Instagram where she recently posted a coming out post. So little 2nd grade me had some good gay intuition + good taste. Still won't talk to her though.

I was in the MIDDLE of having sex with my partner, when his phone rang. It was his mom..... he picked up the phone..... and talked to her about his doctor's appointment while I was still on top of him XD. Needless to say, we didn't finish.
